Two Virginia Gentlemen, "be Gawd, Sah!" go Out to Fight-Nobody Gets Hurt.

A duel between Gen. Peyton Wise and United States District Attorney L. L. Lewis, both of Richmond, took piace yesterday some four or five miles from Warrenton, Va. The Wise-Peyton quarrel has been the leading topic for several days past. Both parties had been trying to get out of Richmond without being followed by the police, but without success until yesterday, when it was reported that Gen. Wise had slipped into a close carriage in the afternoon and been driven to a point some eight or ten miles north of the city, where he boarded the night train on the Chesapeake & Ohio Rallroad for Washington. This report seemed to be confirmed by intelligence from Culpeper that Gen. Wise had been joined by William H. Payne, of Fauquier, at Warrenton Junction, and that both had left for parts unknown. District Attorney Lewis had more trouble in escaping. He was closely housed all day at Richmond and night came without affording him an opportunity to get away. All the outgoing trains were watched by the police, and the last one had left, and Lewis remained a prisoner in the hands of his friends. There was only one more chance, and that was the fast mail leaving Richmond at 5 o'clock yesterday morning for Washington. But how to board this train was the difficulty. It made no stops on the way but two, one at Milford, twenty miles from here, and the other at Aquia Creek. It was impossible to drive to Milford, and to be late on the field was equivalent to being branded with cowardice. In this emergency a disguise and a bold dash, it is said, was resolved upon. Lowis accordingly "made up," assuming a character entirely new to him, and with the aid of true, tried friends he got on the train and sped away with the fast mail in the direction of the National Canital. The same train that took Gen. in, and with the aid of true, tried friends he got on the train and sped away with the fast mail in the direction of the National Capital. The same train that took Gen. Peyton Wise away had also on board Col. John S. Popham, the friend and second of Mr. Lowis in the pending difficulty. Gen. Payne, it is said, acted in the same capacity for Gen. Wise. To add to the complication of this family feud, Congressman George D. Wise, brother of Gen. Wise, also started for the place of meeting yesterday morning, in company with his friend, C. A. Bonham, and it was rumored that Sheffy Lewis, son of the ex-Senator and Readjuster candidate for Lieutenant Governor, had started out to help his uncle, L. L. Lewis. The latter report was found to be untrue, however, and the carriage conveying the Congressman and his friends out of the city limits of Richmond in order to board the northern bound train, was to board the northern bound train, was pursued by the police. The Congressman and his companions jumped out, gained the woods and ran. The police followed suit

It is the pretty waiter girl,
She's one among a score;
And 'tis not that I love them less,
But, oh! I love her more,
lown to the festive board I sit;
She stands behind my chair;
I catch the slight suggestive cough
That tells me she is there.

My pretty, pretty walter girl!
she hath a pleasant voice.
Of chops and steaks, of fish and fowl
she biddeth me make choice.
I ponder on my little joke
While fungering the menu.
Then: "If we are to order duck
I might, perhaps, get you."

Her eyes are on the table cloth; Their glance, it is severe, 'Or, should I call for ventson, 'Twere you again, my dear,' She wears the lotty look of one Who searcheth the top shelf.

The Accept the expression of my deep grief for the death of our beloved President, and my warmest sympathy for Mrs. Garfield and family.

M. M. JACKSON, Consul-General.

LIVERPOOL, ENG.

Convey my heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Garfield. PACKARD. LENNOX, MASS., Sept. 20, 1881.

Secretary Blaine, Washington, D. C .: All my sympathy on the sad end of the late President. My sovereign, Great Britain, and her colonies will be grieved at the loss sustained by the American people.

V. DRUMMOND.

Secretary of State, Washington, U. S. A.:

I request you to assure Mrs. Garfield and the Government of the United States of the grief with which Her Majesty's government have received the announcement of the President's death. Parliament is not sitting, and is thus prevented from giving formal expression to the sorrow and sympathy universally felt in the country—a feeling which has been deepened by the long suspense and by the courage, dignity, and patience shown by the illustrious sufferer.

have been treating an opening into the body for the depth of twelve inches, made by confined pus burrowing its way, as the track of the wound, when the latter went in an entirely different direction. The surgeons admit in the bulletin that an abseess six by four inches had formed in the vicinity of the gall bladder, between the liver and the transverse colon. The bulletin says, also, that the bullet had passed through and fractured the spinal column, a fact heretofore strenuously denied by the surgeons. The bulletin fails to go very much into details, and after it was read Dr. Bliss said that there was a small pus cavity on one of the kidneys not mentioned in the bulletin. The surgeons say that the immediate cause of death was accondary hemorrhage from one of the arteries adjoining the track of the ball, the blood inflaming the peritoneum and nearly a pint escaping in the abdominal cavity. A medical man who heard the report read said that the treatment of the President by the surgeons was condemned by their own report, and that the diagnosis of the case made at the time of the shooting was now proved to be wholly wrong and at fault. Drs. Hamilton and Bliss expected to find the ball where they have insisted for a month it was—in the front part of the right groin—but the autopsy disclosed its presence in another part of the body.

What the Autopsy Developed.

ELBERON, N. J. Sopt. 20.—The following

What the Autopsy Developed,

What the Autopsy Developed,
ELBERON, N. J., Sept. 20.—The following official bulletin was prepared at 11 o'clock to-night by the surgeons who have been in attendance upon the late President:

By previous arrangement a post-mortem examination of the body of President Garfield was made this afternoon in the presence and with the assistance of Dra. Hamilton, Agnew, Bliss, Barnes, Woodward, Reyburn, Andrew H. Smith, of Elberou, and Acting Assistant Surgeon Lamb, of the Army Medical Museum, Washington. The operation was performed by Dr. Jamb. It was found that the ball, after fracturing the right eleventh rib, had passed through It was found that the ball, after fracturing the right eleventh rib, had passed through the spinal column in front of the spinal canal, fracturing the body of the first lumbar vertebre, driving a number of small fragments of bone into the adjacent soft parts, and lodging below the pancreas about two inches and a-half to the left of the spine and behind the peritoneum, where it became completely eneveral. The inner the spine and bealing the pertoneum, where it became completely encysted. The immediate cause of death was secondary hemorrhage from one of the mesenteric arteries adjoining the track of the ball, the blood adjoining the track of the ball, the blood last degree.

the cause of the severe pain in the lower part of the chest complained of just before death. An abscess cavity, six inches by four in dimensions, was found in the vicinity of the gall bladder, between the lower and the transverse colon, which were strongly adherent. It did not involve the substance of the liver, and no communication was found between it and the wound. A long suppurating channel extended from the external wound, between the lower muscles and the right kidney, almost to the right groin. This channel, now known to be due to the burrowing of pus from the wound, was supposed, during life, to have been the track of the ball. On an examination of the organs of the chest evidence of severe bronchitis were found on Joth sides, with bronchial pneumonia of the lower portions of the right lung, and, though to a much less extent on the left, the lungs contain no abscesses and the heart no clots. The liver was cularged and fatty, but free from abscesses. Nor were any found in any other organ, except the left kidney, which contained near its surface a small abscess about one-third of an inch in diameter. In reviewing the history of the case in connection with the autopsy, it is quite evident that the different suppurating surfaces, and especially the fractured spongy tissue of the vertebre, furnish a sufficient explanation of the septic condition which existed.

How Chinamen Away From Home Obtain Their Spouses.

A Chinaman, when anxious to have a wife of his own nation, sends a letter to an agent in Hong Kong. A reporter has one of these epistles, but it is practically impossible to translate it into English. The following, however, is a condensed translation: "I want a wife. She must be a maiden under twenty years of age, and must not have left her father's House, she must also have never read a book, and her even also have never read a book, and her eye-lashes must be half an inch in length. Her teeth must be as spackling as the pearls of Ceylon. Her breath must be like unto the teeth must be as sparkling as the pearls of Ceylon. Her breath must be like unto the scents of the odorous groves of Java, and her attire must be from the silken weavers of Ka-Li-Ching, which are on the banks of the greatest river in the world—the ever-flowing Yang-tae-Kiang." The price of a Chinese woman delivered in Sydney is £38, but two Chinese women only cost £52; therefore, the heathen Chinese import their women in couples. The importer never sees his women before they arrive, and then he generally selects the best looking one. The other is shown around to a number of well-to-do Chinese, and after they have inspected her she is submitted to what may be called public auction. The writer happened to be present at one of these sales. A young girl, aged about nineteen, was offered, and after some spirited bidding she was purchased by a wealthy Chinese store-keeper, whose a wealthy Chinese store-keeper, whose place of business is in one of the leading towns of New South Wales, for £120. Dr. John Deys, health officer of this city, has successfully performed the opperation of skin grafting upon Mary Foster, aged ten years. Several months ago she accidentally scalded herself. Her body was badly burned, particularly the right arm, the skin of which, from the shoulder to the tips of the fingers, peeled off. The arm was slow to heal, and caused intense pain, while the discharge from it was very weakening. On the 1st of May Dr. Deys decided to perform the skin grafting operation. Pieces of skin were taken from the arms of four or five young men and were placed on the scalded arms. About three-fourths of the grafts took root and slowly grew till they covered the intervening space, and joining together afforded that protection which the scalded arm needed. The arm was nearly healed in six weeks, and it is now pronounced well.

Two Vermont Boys and a Bear.

Two Vermont lads went up Mansfield Mountain trout-fishing, and spent the night in a room on the third floor of the Half-way House, which was otherwise empty. During the night they were awakened by the sound of some animal scrambling in at the lower window. Then came sounds of scratching and clattering on the floor below and then upon the stairs. Thoroughly alarmed, and, having no weapons but pocket-knives, the boys new sprang up and drew their bed across the door to bar the entrance. The creature came to the door, and, after snuffing the cracks, endeavored to push it open. The boys crowded the bedstead against the door with all their might, but were in a way to be overpowered, when, finding their voices, they shouted loudly at the intruder. He took shouted loudly at the intruder. He took fright at the shouting, and scuttled down stairs and out of the window. The morn-ing light showed scratches on the door and vindow-casings, and outside the window the plain tracks of a bear in the soft earth.

It is hardly to be supposed that the French officers who witnessed the recent review and manœuvres of the German army in Hanover, as they stood with note-books in hand to watch the artillery practice, in hand to watch the artillery practice, were aware that the guns were served with powder captured in Metz and other arsenals during the campaign which made Germany an empire and France a republic, and robbed the latter of two choice provinces. Yet such, it is said, was the fact. Of such powder there is still great store in Germany, though it would only seem to be thought suitable for the baser purpose of blank cartridges. blank cartridges.

The doctrine that human affairs are reg-ulated by chance or luck, and that great fortunes are made more by the combination of propitious circumstances than by the intrinsic merits of the fortune-maker, has generally been thought to derive sup-port from the first Napoleon. It is often believed that the hero of Austerlitz and port from the first Napoleon. It is often believed that the hero of Austerlitz and Jena might have been a great general and notifing more, if a peculiar accident had not led to his early sequaintance with the French capital, and to that most notable incident of his early life when he saved the directorate from impending ruin and Paris from the mob. However this may be, it is certainly interesting to know how far the accepted records of this circumstance are correct, and how the first impulse was given to the rise of a name and character the most celebrated in modern times. A grand-daughter of one of the persons engaged in those events has just written to the French papers to protest against the story that Barras first procured the appointment of Bonaparte to the command of the troops in Paris.

According to ker version, Barras was altogether at a loss where to look for a man who would fight his battles against the sections, whose rage against the directors together at a loss where to look for a man who would fight his battles against the sections, whose rage against the directors was on the point of breaking out into violence. The established government, silly and corrupt as it was, had a sufficient body of troops under its command to resist the violence of the insurgent masses. But it had no man of experience and popularity to whom it would intrust the task of leading the soldiers. Barras, accordingly, applied to citizen Laroche—or Monsieur Laroche, as his granddaughter rather grotesquely calls him—to know if he could recommend a man and then the name of Napoleon was mentioned. But Harras, it appears, rather turned up his nose at the suggestion, and even refused to sign the order appointing him; so that this document, which is still preserved, bears only the signature of Laroche, who was at that time president of the assembly. Had the order been canceled by any one of the directors, the history of France and of Europe since that time might have been very different from what it has been.

"The lingering rays of the setting sun have scarce taken their departure ere the gentle moon casts her silvery sheen over the parched earth, replacing with her colder rays the dazzling splondor of the God of Day." They have ice now at the soda fountain at the corner, she observed. Still proserving his presence of mind he continued: "While from the dim horizon emerges from time to time the lesser glory of a twinkling star, whose tender glimmer, like a soft small voice appealing to the inmost thoughts, says"—"There's the ice-cream wagon right in front of our house," yelled the young lady's birother, who just then emerged from the front door. The young man gave it up in despair and yielded up his last 50 cents with an inward groan. He will not be able to visit until next Saturday, when, with replenished purse, he can brave the danger of ice-cream carts and indulge in flights of imagery to his heart's content.
